I'm interested to know if the properties subject to the Abbreviated Platt Hearing set for September 16, 2026, have been inspected by the cultural resources department or an archaeologist to determine whether there is anything of historical significance on the properties. At a minimum the property owners should be asked whether they would like this to be done so that ancient structures or features they might not even realize are there can be documented and noted - any artifacts found are of course the landowner's property. It does not take long to do this and the cost is low. It does not hinder the property owner's use of the land. Thank you.
